FROM THE PASTOR

Take Time to Rest

Unless you have an occupation that requires you to “make hay while the sun shines,” summer is typically a time to take a vacation, and slow things down. The following meditation by Benedict XVI shows well how important it is to do this. Commenting on the Gospel we hear on the Sixteenth Sunday of Ordinary Time [B], he takes as his point of departure the following line: “Come away by yourselves to a deserted place and rest a while” (Mk. 6:31). He continues, it “shows us how even the disciples of Jesus had to face the problem of stress and recuperation (Mk. 6:30-34). The apostles return from their first mission, full of what they have experienced and achieved. They are totally preoccupied with recounting their successes; in fact, it has become a whole business operation, and things have gone so far that, with all the coming and going, they no longer have time to eat. Perhaps they are expecting to be congratulated on their zeal; but instead, Jesus summons them to go with Him to a solitary place where they can be alone and rest.

“I believe it is good that we should discern the humanity of Jesus in an event like this... I can just imagine His face as He says these words; whereas the apostles are positively beside themselves and, full of zeal and self-importance, neglect their meals, Jesus brings them down from the clouds: Have a rest for awhile! ... We always overestimate ourselves when we imagine we are completely indispensable and that the world or the Church depends on our frantic activity. Often it will be an act of real humility and creaturely honesty to stop what we are doing, to acknowledge our limits, to take time to draw breath and rest – as the creature, man, is designed to do. I am not suggesting that sloth is a good thing, but I do want to suggest that we revise our catalogue of virtues, as it has developed in the Western world, where activity alone is regarded as valid and where the attitudes of beholding, wonder, recollection and quiet are of no account, or at least are felt to need some justification. This causes the atrophying of certain essential human faculties... God does not come to light in the artificial world of man-made things. So it is all the more necessary for us to leave our workaday world behind and go in search of the breath of creation, in order that we may meet Him and thus find ourselves” (from “meditations at vacation time” in Seek that which is above, Ignatius Press).

It is important then, not to let the summer rush by without responding to that invitation to rest a while and behold the wonders of creation and, most importantly, the Creator. When we do so we can discern more accurately His purpose for it all; we can see more clearly His activity in our lives; and we will be refreshed to continue doing His will. One of the most important ways that we respond to God's invitation to rest in Him is through prayer, recalling that Jesus said: "Come to me, all you who labor and are burdened, and I will give you rest... learn from me, for I am meek and humble of heart; and you will find rest for yourselves" (Matt.11: 28-29).

~Fr. Michael J. Miller
